Practice: I am a principal at Chuhak & Tecson P.C. and concentrate my practice in estate planning, estate and trust administration, corporate transactions and not-for-profit organizations.

Project: A reception to benefit the work of the National Public Housing Museum on the evening of a performance of the Black Ensemble Theater’s “Chicago’s Golden Soul.”

Why I got involved: A deep love of American history in general and oral history in particular. The mission of the National Public Housing Museum — presenting and preserving the independent, personal stories of public housing residents — resonated with me since a good friend, professor D. Bradford Hunt of Roosevelt University, introduced me to this organization.

Why others should attend: This event is open to everyone. It’s a wonderful celebration of some of our greatest American music. It’s an inspiring evening that tells a triumphant story in song.

Who it benefits: A portion of the proceeds benefit the National Public Housing Museum, a 501(c)(3) organization.

When: A reception starts at 5:30 p.m., and the show follows at 7:30 p.m. on March 27 at 4450 N. Clark St.

How to buy tickets: Tickets are $100 and available at publichousingmuseum.org.
